

CROSSVISION MISSION APRIL 2010 TESTIMONY & UPDATE

Jesus came and said to them, "All authority in heaven and on earth has been given to me. Go therefore and make disciples of all nations..." (Matthew 28:18-19a)

I often hear things like, "Glen is a missionary in Mexico." So some of you might be surprised to learn CrossVision is not a mission ministry to Mexico at all. It is true that I have served for close to thirty years on mission teams working in Mexico. As well as the fact, that we work closely with a sister ministry in Mexico while training leaders. However, the call and commission in the verse above defines the true purpose of CrossVision as well as every goal we fix our hearts on. The two action verbs, "go and make," describe our entire reason for existing.

Many of you have served on teams and gone through training that has truly transformed your spiritual life and your relationship with Christ. When God chooses to use me in the process of making a disciple, I come to greater understand what the purpose of the "Ministry" of CrossVision means to Jesus. Specifically, how much He wants to use this ministry in the lives of individuals and the life of individual churches.

Last month I had the privilege of serving in Brazil with a team from Farmstead Baptist in Jasper, Alabama. The team leader is one of the best CrossVision has ever trained, so I knew I was not going for him. But God planted one of the team members, a young man named Chase, on my witnessing team. I believe He handpicked Chase and chose to use this mission experience to make him a disciple. I am so thankful He chose to use me, as well as, teach me during this week. I was once again reminded that discipleship is best done away from the distractions of our busy, comfortable lives and is made personal in the "going two by two" model taught by Christ.

Chase and I worked through the making of a street evangelist / missionary. God revealed the important necessity of having scripture fresh on our mind and the critical tool of preparing to present the Gospel if we are ever to disciple others. It was a joy to watch God draw Chase to His word and increase his heart's desire to share the Gospel. As humbly as I know how, I say it became a joy for me to get to teach and invest my relationship with Christ in this brave, young missionary's life.

Yes, God used this trip to Brazil to remind me that I need to remind each of you that God has called CrossVision to help you and your church in fulfilling the great commission call and to understand Jesus' methods of transformational discipleship through a mission experience.

Together "We will move forward on our knees" (Eph 6:18)
